

```
#include <iostream>
```

```
int main() {
```

```
    double voltage, current, resistance;
```

```
    char choice;
```

```
    do {
```

```
        std::cout << "\n--- Ohm's Law Calculator Matrix ---\n";
```

```
        std::cout << "Enter measured circuit source Voltage (V): ";
```

```
        std::cin >> voltage;
```

```
        std::cout << "Enter measured loop current flow load (A): ";
```

```
        std::cin >> current;
```

```
        if (current != 0) {
```

```
            resistance = voltage / current;
```

```
            std::cout << "Calculated resistance magnitude value: " << resistance << " Ohms\n";
```

```
        } else {
```

```
            std::cout << "Mathematical Error: Division by zero current flow is undefined.\n";
```

```
        }
```

```
        std::cout << "Do you wish to calculate another element resistance metric? (Y/N): ";
```

```
        std::cin >> choice;
```

```
    } while (choice != 'N' && choice != 'n');
```

```
    std::cout << "Program execution terminated successfully." << std::endl;
```

```
    return 0;
```

```
}
```